Biographical Note

Arthur Henry Schreiber was born on November 8, 1914 in Chicago, Illinois. His parents were Hungarian immigrants. Arthur studied architecture at the Armour Institute (now the Illinois Institute of Technology) in Chicago and graduated with a bachelor's degree in architecture in 1936. After serving as an apprentice at several firms, he received his license to practice architecture in 1938. That same year Arthur established an architectural and building firm with his identical twin brother, Charles, who had also earned a degree in architecture from the Armour Institute.

Arthur and Charles Schreiber's business partnership emphasized each person's strengths. Arthur was responsible for conception and implementation of all architectural design and Charles focused on building and construction supervision. In 1939, Arthur married Lucile Newman.

In the Chicago area, the Schreibers became known for innovative but affordable houses and apartments. They won first prize in the Suburban Home classification of the 1945 National Association of Home Builder Design Competition for a house built in Highland Park, Illinois. The house featured a one-story ranch house design with spacious interiors, easy access to outdoor terraces, and a two-car garage with a built-in workshop and greenhouse. Estimated cost of construction was $10,150, not including land, landscaping, and architect's fees.

Arthur designed two plans (one for single story; one for two-story) for duplex homes for workers in the Chicago area during World War II. Widely different exteriors were achieved by changing the roof line slightly, adding dormers, and different types of millwork. Arthur also designed apartments and prefabricated homes in the area for veterans returning from the war.

After serving as a pilot in the Army Air Corps in World War II, Arthur moved to Phoenix, Arizona for health reasons in 1946. Three years later Charles also moved to the Phoenix area and the brothers reestablished their business partnership in Arizona.

In the Phoenix area the Schreibers were active in designing homes in the many new tract housing developments throughout the rapidly growing Phoenix area in the 1950s and 1960s. The Schreibers entered into a partnership with Del Webb to work on the Sun City, Arizona development and they designed the original five models of 900 square-foot homes in 1958. They also worked with Del Webb on Sun City projects in Texas and Florida.

In addition to designing for Del Webb, they worked for major developers and construction companies that included Trailor-Murdock, Cavalier Homes, E.L. Farmer, Erwin Brothers, Del Monte Development, Crescent Builders, Rosing Brothers, and Fleetwood Homes. The Schreibers also developed the Arizona Manor (or Camelback Villa) resort at 24th Street and Camelback in Phoenix and were innovators in bringing townhouses to the area, designing the 40-unit Williamsburg Square. And the Schreibers were the first to design and sell condominiums in the area with the Orchard House at 12th Street and Rose Lane in Phoenix in 1963.

As it had in the Chicago area, the Schreibers' partnership in Arizona functioned as an integrated house design and building team. Arthur headed up the architectural work, Charles supervised the construction, and their brother Barney handled the business of sales and finance during some years of the partnership. Also similar to their Chicago area experience, the Schreibers emphasized high-quality but affordable designs. For example, the 1951 Arizona Pacemaker Home, sold for $7,250, provided 1180 square feet of living space with three bedrooms, lots of natural wood throughout the house, and ample closets.

Arthur, along with Charles, was awarded the title of Fellow in the Society of American Registered Architects in 1958. The Schreibers also worked in Hawaii designing housing developments for the Hawaii-Kai Development Company, owned by industrialist Henry J. Kaiser, and on projects in California. In the early 1970s the Schreiber brother's business partnership ended. Arthur continued to practice architecture on his own, designing various projects including condominiums and numerous homes in Phoenix and Scottsdale. Arthur Schreiber died in 1999, survived by his daughters Gale Copland and Wendy Carroll.

Scope and Content

The collection consists of architectural drawings, renderings, photographs as well as professional files. Of particular note is a significant collection of brochures and publicity information from various developers in the Phoenix area, such as Del Webb, Erwin Brothers, Allied Construction, and Pacemaker.

Provenance

The collection was donated to Arizona State University in 2000 by the family of Arthur Schreiber, with a small addition to the collection donated in 2018 by architect Doug Sydnor.
